1	Lima, Peru	Not yet allowed to re-open, but we anticipate scenario 2 like you.	UNANSWERED
2	India	Not open yet	Not open yet
3	Sao Paulo, Brazil	In Brazil we don't yet know when schools will be allowed to re-open. Our vacation time is early in June. We are beginning to plan for re-entry, however, we don't know when it will be.	This is our 4th week of home learning. Once we re-open my guess is that home learning will no longer be offered as teachers will be teaching as usual. Our students haven't left Brazil.
4	Havana, Cuba	UNANSWERED	UNANSWERED
5	Dhaka, Bangladesh	Our country is currently closed.	UNANSWERED
6	Quito, Ecuador	UNANSWERED	UNANSWERED
7	Beijing, China	We are doing a hybrid of blended learning. We are going to run 2 synchronous classes in the morning led by the subject teacher but supported by the staff who are at school. The afternoon is a mixture of social/emotional learning and reconnecting and study hall/support time to do assigned work. Whether students are present or not, they will still be expected to complete the same tasks.	We are doing a hybrid of blended learning. The afternoon is a mixture of social/emotional learning and reconnecting and study hall/support time to do assigned work. Teachers will not be asked to create different lessons for students who are and are not present at the school.
8	Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam	Not the case currently, but this may come to pass in the next couple of weeks. If it happens, teachers will post lessons and assignments on digital platforms currently being used (PowerSchool Learning and SeeSaw.). We will use Google Meet to connect during class time and/or record portions of the class for posting as needed.	When this happens, teachers will have to work on Vietnam time and use Zoom or GoogleMeet to be present with students and colleagues and parents.

14	Bahrain	We have a minority of students that might end up being outside the country if we reopen. Students will continue learning remotely but less Synchronous learning will be in place. We will rely more on asynchronous learning with this minority	At the moment, all our teachers are in Bahrain, even the foreigners. We have advised our teachers that are planning to travel to see their families in July in case Airport opens to come back beginning of August. In case there will be a month Quarantine required. We decided to be flexible in regards of orientation week and make it online.
15	Muscat, Oman	We are still closed.	On the whole, students and teachers are in the country currently.

1	Like you, we anticipate needing to support face-to-face learning for some students and distance learning for others. While no plans are yet in place (we need to wait for the numbers to see how many students/staff are here and willing to come to campus) we are talking about a blended learning environment. Some ideas include: dividing teachers so half will do distance and half will do FtF; video recording lessons and having teachers post those for students who are not on campus; having teachers who are not here offer distance learning options. Right now, there are too many unknowns to know what our needs will be and what our capabilities will be. So... we're having a lot of what-if conversations to try and understand the various scenarios and options. I'm really looking forward to seeing what you learn from others and happy to share when we have a plan.	UNANSWERED	UNANSWERED

2	Hybrid learning model, using online learning resources for all students, with co-present students' learning in classes. Tentatively....	Using IST timezone, classrooms supported by co-teachers and virtual resources that are already well established. Again tentatively...	UNANSWERED
4	Open and offer some face to face and some online	Open and offer some face to face with those who are here and some online with those who can't be hear.	UNANSWERED
5	We are thinking of, but have made no decisions on this. It may be that we have split shifts in the school for social distancing and it may also be that we do a blend of online and F2F learning.	Teachers may work in split shifts too, where they come in on some days and stay home others to do online learning.	https://drive.google.com/open?id=1QCctLRRvuzzyW8yE534iBY04USjYBcKlx
6	Blended with Teacher Assistants or proctors in the physical classrooms.	Same thing, from afar with proctors or teacher assistants in the classrooms	UNANSWERED
7	This will operate the same as above.	Same as above.	UNANSWERED
8	Everything will be around Vietnam time as a basis. Asynchronous learning will take place. Screencasts, emails, and digital assignments. When "class time" takes place that will happen through Google Meets on Vietnam time. Consultations can be arranged between faculty and student/parents as needed. 9	We don't that many International staff and/or students so we will cover the teachers that do not make it. Students not in school will continue online. We are looking at recruiting staff for August and will probably have to hire local bilingual Argentine teachers as International teachers cannot get a visa at the moment. Hope this helps Rob but we are in a different situation to you.	UNANSWERED	UNANSWERED
10		Don't apply	UNANSWERED
11	We have had several parents say that when and if we do reopen, they will keep their kids at home. We will sympathise and continue online learning for them. Depending on the numbers we may rearrange classes in those physically present and those online and assign the more confident online teachers to those classes.	All our teachers are here, but it is possible that some are declared vulnerable and so will not be allowed to come in. They will continue online teaching. We have some conflict between a president who wants a gradual return from May 4th, and a Ministry of Labour who has declared everyone over 60 vulnerable and unable to return to work until June 9th! I am therefore declared vulnerable!! In fact we are unlikely to be allowed back by either of those dates. I am cautiously hoping for an August start to the second semester, but	UNANSWERED

13	We have planned to have blended learning: online with the teacher/ face -to -face with those students who return. As well as other staff/substitute when necessary.	Plan to continue online teaching and learning; team teaching with the online teacher and other teachers to collaborate the teaching and learning.	UNANSWERED
14	We will inform students that grading will continue as is and student will need to follow agenda posted on website to complete CW, watch the necessary videos and do the necessary reading. They will have their own agenda and clear instructions to catch up with the CW missed.	Teaching will be normal. Teachers that won't be able to attend will be replaced. We might flexible with High School teachers. Additionally, we are making research for companies like Apex learning and Iread as an alternative solutions for distant learning that don't rely on teachers' presence.	UNANSWERED
15	Similar to elsewhere in the world, we do not know what the situation will be after the summer. I would imagine that we will continue to provide online learning for students unable to be in the country.	This is an interesting scenario and of course potentially even trickier with some teachers leaving for new jobs and others arriving. It will very much depend upon numbers with the goal of course of providing our HS programmes (whether online or face to face)	UNANSWERED
